

Biodata: Tayebe Razeghizade, Esmaeel Nourmohammadi, & Mehri Izadi

Tayebe Razeghizade received a bachelor's degree in software engineering from Shariati vocational and technical University, Tehran, Iran. She completed her Master's degree in the major of Teaching English as a Foreign Language at University of Sistan and Baluchestan, Zahedan, Iran. She is an English instructor. She is interested in research on English as a foreign language and discourse analysis and her hobby is reviewing critical discourse studies. She is the author of a paper entitled as "Forewords of Edited Academic Books in Applied Linguistics: A Rhetorical Analysis".

Esmaeel Nourmohammadi received his Master's degree in Teaching English as a Foreign Language from Shiraz University, Shiraz, Iran. He completed his PhD in the same major at Allame Tabatabaee University, Tehran, Iran. He is an assistant professor at the English Language and Literature Department, University of Sistan and Baluchestan, Zahedan, Iran. He teaches language learning principles, translation, research in second language, and language testing. He is especially interested in language research and translation and has published articles in reputable scientific journals such as LINGUA, Applied Research on English Language, and Journal of Research in Applied Linguistics. Also he is the author of a book entitled as "Exercises in Everyday English Metaphorical Expressions".

Mehri Izadi is a lecturer of Teaching English as a Foreign Language at University of Sistan and Baluchestan, Zahedan, Iran. She received her Master's degree in Teaching English as a Foreign Language from University of Sistan and Baluchestan, Zahedan, Iran. She completed her PhD in the same major at Chabahar Maritime University, Chabahar, Iran. She teaches letter writing, English Language Grammar, philosophy of education, English listening and speaking. She has authored and co-authored articles in reputable scientific journals such as Linguistic Approaches to Bilingualism, Italian Sociological Review, Journal of Research in Applied Linguistics, and International Review of Research in Open and Distance Learning.