

Biodata: Jurana Aziz

Jurana Aziz is an associate professor in Language Education at the University of Dhaka, Bangladesh and is currently doing her PhD at the University of Minnesota, USA in Curriculum and Instruction. She has already published in International journals.

She has received many awards such as the Prime Minister's Education Award, Deans' Merit Scholarship, and CARLA fellowship from the University of Minnesota. Her research interests include language policy, classroom discourse, teacher education, and immigrant children's wellbeing.

She was the co-author of Marginalized Poor People's Educational Challenges – a study commissioned by NETZ Bangladesh in collaboration with the Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany.