

Biodata: Mino0 Alemi, Niayesh Pazoki Moakhar, & Rezanejad

Mino0 Alemi is an Associate Professor of Applied Linguistics at IAU, West Tehran Branch, and a research associate at Sharif University of Technology (SUT), Iran. Her areas of interest include L2 pragmatic instruction & assessment, technology enhancement education, teacher education, discourse analysis, and ESP (English for Specific Purposes). She has also published over 100 papers in different refereed journals, and two book chapters in the volume Lessons from Good Language Teachers (Cambridge University Press, 2020). She is also the co-editor of Pragmatics Pedagogy in English as an International Language (Routledge, 2020).

Niayesh Pazoki Moakhar is a Ph.D. student in Educational Psychology at Simon Fraser University, Canada. Her main research interest centers on refugees with special needs and their educational experiences in everyday life. She also studies multiculturalism and language diversification in refugee studies due to her previous educational background in Applied Linguistics.

Atefeh Rezanejad is a Ph.D. holder in Applied Linguistics from Allameh Tabataba'i University, Tehran, Iran. She has been teaching various university courses in applied linguistics since 2003. Her areas of interest include intercultural language learning, pragmatics, teacher education, and sociolinguistics.