

Biodata: Andrew Philominraj, Ranjeeva Ranjan, Lucía Ubilla Rosales, Andrea Cocio Seguel, & Jose Gabriel Brauchy Castillo

Andrew Philominraj is Associate Professor in the Department of languages of the Faculty of Education of Universidad Católica del Maule, Talca, Chile. He is currently the Director of the Ph.D. program in Education in Consortium. His research interest is in the field of ELT, language pedagogy, and initial teacher formation. He has served as Vice-President of IATEFL-Chile for three consecutive periods. He has been actively involved in national and regional Projects for the betterment of English language teaching and has published several articles in national and international indexed journals. email: andrew@ucm.cl

Ranjeeva Ranjan is Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Education of Universidad Católica del Maule, Talca, Chile, where he also worked as a Postdoctoral Researcher. He completed his Ph.D. from Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU), New Delhi, India and is engaged in teaching and research for more than 12 years. His research interest lies in the field of language pedagogy and teacher education. He has published several research articles in international, refereed and Scopus indexed journals. Email: ranjan@ucm.cl

Lucía Ubilla Rosales holds a PhD. in Linguistics (Universidad de Concepción, Chile) and a Master's degree in TESOL (Greensboro College, USA). She is an associate professor and director of the master's program in Teaching English in Early Childhood and Primary Education at Universidad Católica de Temuco, Chile. Moreover, she teaches in the English Language Pedagogy Program at the same university. Dr. Ubilla has taught undergraduate and postgraduate courses on English language learning, teaching methodology, academic writing, linguistics, and research in different Chilean universities. Her research interests include reading, collaborative writing, foreign language teaching and learning, and pre-service teacher education.

Andrea Cocio Seguel is a teacher of English, a Master's in Education and a Ph.D. in Innovation and Lifelong Learning from Deusto University. She is a researcher at the Faculty of Education at San Sebastián University. Her lines of research include teacher identity; applied linguistics; discourse analysis; the didactics of language learning, and the teaching practices of reading mediation, themes that she has developed through different projects (ANID, Fondecyt, Fonide). She is currently the leading researcher of a Fondecyt project about pedagogy students' identity and professional positioning (2020 -2023).

Jose Gabriel Brauchy Castillo holds a PhD. in Literature from New York University, a MA in Romance Languages from the University of Illinois at Chicago, and a Master in Comparative Literature from the University of Paris, France. He teaches upper level courses of culture, academic writing, and literature in the EFL Teacher Education BA Program at Universidad del Bío-Bío. He currently serves as Program Head. email: jbrauchy@ubiobio.cl