

Alison Youngblood is an Assistant Professor of Teaching English as a Second Language at Western Kentucky University. Her research focuses on vocabulary, English for specific purposes, and curriculum development. She has taught English in the United States, Japan, and South Korea to both children and adults.

Keith Folse is a Professor of Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages at the University of Central Florida. He is the author of 43 books and publishes research on corpus linguistics and lexicogrammar. He is a frequent conference presenter in the United States and abroad.