

Biodata: Mohammed Yassin Mohd Aba Sha'ar, Budi Waluyo, Nur Lailatur Rofiah, Tanasinee Chaimongkol, Chettarin Archarit

Mohammed Yassin Mohd Aba Sha'ar is currently an Assistant Professor in the English Program at the School of Liberal Arts, also member of the Research Center for Language Teaching and Learning, Walailak University, Thailand. His research interests include English Medium Instruction (EMI), translanguaging, educational technology (EdTech), and English drama. He has published articles on community literature and English language teaching in the Thai EFL context in reputable journals.

Budi Waluyo, World's Top 2% Scientist (Stanford 2025), is an Associate Professor at Walailak University. He earned degrees from the University of Bengkulu, IDN (BA, Indonesian Ministry of Education Scholarship), the University of Manchester, UK (MA, Ford Foundation International Fellowships Program), and Lehigh University, USA (PhD, Fulbright Presidential Scholarship), and was a research fellow at Columbia University, USA. A UK Higher Education Academy Fellow (FHEA), he has more than 10 years of English teaching experience in higher education, has published 76 Scopus-indexed articles with an H-index of 18, and his internationally recognized research spans English language teaching, educational technology, and international education.

Nur Lailatur Rofiah, Assistant Professor, is currently a Doctor of Philosophy student at the School of Liberal Arts, Walailak University, Thailand. She serves as a lecturer and a member of the Research Center for Language Teaching and Learning at the School of Languages and General Education, Walailak University. Her research interests lie at the intersection of educational psychology, educational technology, and English language teaching (ELT), with particular attention to contemporary issues in second and foreign language education. Her scholarly work has been published in reputable Scopus- and SSCI-indexed journals, including TESL-EJ, Teaching English with Technology, and Journal of Multilingual and Multicultural Development, among others.

Tanasinee Chaimongkol (she/her) is an M.A. candidate in the Faculty of Liberal Arts at Prince of Songkla University, Hat Yai, Thailand. Her research lies at the intersection of cultural studies, gender studies, sociolinguistics, and translation studies. A native of Southern Thailand, Tanasinee was born and raised in the Kanchanadit district of Surat Thani province. Her recent work includes a study on gender and misogyny in Thai BL narratives. Before her graduate studies, Tanasinee served as a lecturer of General English at Nakhon Si Thammarat Rajabhat University for four years. She holds a Bachelor of Arts in English from Walailak University.

Chettarin Archarit is a university lecturer and a PhD candidate in Curriculum and Instruction at Thaksin University. He holds a master's degree in English for Professional Development from the National Institute of Development Administration with honors. His academic work focuses on English reading instruction, specifically integrating critical thinking and constructivist theories for higher education. He has experience in developing instructional materials and assessments for Business English and English for Multicultural Understanding. His current research examines reading strategies to support independent learning among university students.